Pet Microchips

What is a microchip?

A microchip is a small, electronic chip enclosed in a glass cylinder about the size of a grain of rice. The microchip is activated by a scanner which receives information about the pet's owners and home from the chip.

The best reason to have your animals microchipped is to improve the chance that you'll get your animal back if it becomes lost or stolen.

Happy reunions are happening all around us, thanks to microchips!

"Lucky had been missing for five months and I thought I would never see him again. Then one day out of the blue, an animal control officer came to my house and told me Lucky had been found. I am so happy to have him back at his rightful home where he will be given a lot of love. This would have never been possible if it wasn't for the microchip Washoe County Regional Animal Services registered to Lucky. I would recommend this service to all pet owners."
